Tenure Track Position
Orthodontics and Pediatric Dentistry

The Department of Orthodontics and Pediatric Dentistry (OPD) in the School of Dentistry at the University of Michigan is recruiting an outstanding scientist at the Associate or Professor level on the tenure track.

OPD and the School of Dentistry offer an outstanding work environment and enjoy a robust tradition of collaborative research with several schools and institutes at the University of Michigan. The department has strong research programs in bone cell biology, skeletal development, craniofacial skeletal development, tooth development, virtual/augmented reality, 3D imaging and analyses, plus surgical, orthodontic and dental treatment outcome studies on populations that include patients with special needs and/or craniofacial anomalies, as well as outstanding university-wide facilities and resources available to support our faculty members including outstanding core facilities in sequencing, flow cytometry, biostatistics, bioinformatics, proteomics, transgenic animal models, imaging and microscopy. The University of Michigan provides an extraordinary venue for interdisciplinary collaboration, with extensive resources to assist professional growth and development. Tailored, university-wide mentoring programs are crafted for new faculty members. The successful candidate will have the opportunity to actively participate in well-established PhD programs in Oral Health Sciences and the Program in Biomedical Sciences, which includes 14 doctoral programs.
